MORE COMPLICATIONS IN SCHOOL PROBLEM

Provincial Architect Advises Against Use of Assembly Hall—Does Not Make Any Estimate of Cost of Making Alterations.

The School Board held a special meeting on September 26th to deal with the letter received from the Provincial Architect relative to the proposed conversion of the assembly hall into two class rooms. All the members of the Board were present.

The provincial architect was in the city a short time ago and made a cursory examination of the assembly hall. He refused to discuss the matter with the ratepayers who were present at the time, preferring to send in a written report.

The secretary had sent to the provincial architect, in his letter of September 12th, the plans of the central school, together with information concerning the number of pupils in attendance, the lavatory equipment, the ventilation and the heating equipment.

The letter from the Provincial Architect was as follows:

Edmonton, September 18th, 1924.

Sir:

I have to acknowledge receipt of yours of the 12th inst. and also the plans of your school building. I have gone very carefully into the proposal for adapting the third floor of your building (now occupied as assembly hall) for the purpose of providing two additional class rooms, and I beg to advise you in connection with this matter as follows:

The only feasible way to divide the assembly hall into two rooms would be by building a partition north and south. It is possible by this means to provide two rooms approximately 25 feet by 32 feet, allowing for space required for cloak rooms, but there are a number of quite serious difficulties to overcome to make these rooms suitable for class room purposes.

The points of most particular importance are:

1. Lighting: The generally accepted practice in school design is to provide in class rooms a glass area of one-fifth of the floor area, and this glass area should be to the left of the pupils, and should moreover be even ly distributed along the length of the class room. To obtain this in your case would require the entire reconstruction of the dormer windows. As to the room on the east side something approximately near the required glass area could be obtained by reconstructing the dormer, the windows to be carried up within twelve inches of the assembly ceiling, and the sills to be about three feet from the floor, and also lengthen the dormer by at least three additional sash. This would mean that the dormer would require to be covered with a flat roof. Also it would be necessary to cut into the wall roof of the school and provide a flat from the eaves back of the wall to the dormer; by doing this sufficient glass area might be provided in the east room, but it would have the disadvantage that the window surface would be too far removed from the other side of the class room. In the west room it would be impossible to provide anything like an adequate glass area. I would also point out that the dormer in the North is of no value for lighting the proposed class rooms.

2. Heating: The present radiation in your assembly hall is approximately 360 square feet; each one of your proposed class rooms allowing for ad-

THE ROTARY CARNIVAL

The brown Chautauqua tent arrived in Red Deer on Saturday morning, and an energetic bunch of the Rotarians got busy and by noon the big canvas had reared its huge bulk on the city square west of the Armouries and gave presence and life to the Rotary Carnival, to the selling of tickets on the car and to all the details necessary in the building up of the programme. And now everything is set for the grand opening of the Carnival on Thursday evening.

A host of volunteer help will assist the Rotarians in putting over the Carnival and the Rotary Club are particularly pleased with the fine response they have had to their requests for assistance.

Practically all the booths, concessions, entertainment, etc., will take place in the big tent, with the dancing in the Armouries. Bone's orchestra will furnish the music for the dance and will also contribute to the programme in the tent previous to the dancing. A fine array of local talent will entertain the visitors with the latest and most popular numbers, and the people will be given a dollar's worth of fun, all for 10c. The stunts of two or three local artists will create amusement to no end.

The booths and concessions will be in charge of members of the club, assisted by volunteer help, and they will provide all kinds of fun and entertainment for the big crowd that is sure to be there. There will be blanket booths, hot dog stands, ham and bacon stands, candy booths, doll stands, aluminum ware, ice cream and soft drinks, electric lamps, corn on the cob, novelties, etc.—something for everybody.

The carnival spirit will prevail in Red Deer for these three days and every citizen of town and country is expected to loosen up and join in the big celebration. It's the biggest local attempt ever made to raise funds for community purposes, and it looks as if it will meet with a splendid response from the people. Plan to attend every night. You'll sure enjoy it.

TAKES OVER THE WINDSOR GARAGE

Alderman E. They will motor the entire distance by car. He does not expect to return until some time next spring.

F. J. Crundwell, an experienced machinist who has been working with the Webbers, the big garage men of Calgary, one of the oldest and best known firms in that city, has taken over the Windsor, and will be able to give the patrons of this well known garage the very best of service. Mr. Crundwell is a machinist by trade, and is able to do all kinds of machine work. Fred Pengelly will remain with the new management, which will be good news to his many friends, as he is a thorough hustler and understands his business well. One of the principal features of the business will be the recharging of batteries, for which they have every facility. The firm will also make a strong feature of live and dead storage of cars. We feel assured Mr. Crundwell will have the best wishes of the community in his business enterprise and that he will maintain the high standard of efficiency for which the Windsor Garage is noted.

DAIRY PRODUCTS' WONDERFUL RECORD

Red Deer Dairy Products Company, Limited, H. W. Trimble, manager, hold a most remarkable record of merit with regard to their exhibits of butter at the leading fairs of Canada the past season.

They only exhibited three boxes of butter during the whole season that did not take a prize.

At Edmonton, with 68 entries, they had 4 entries, and took four prizes, 3 firsts and 1 second, with an average of 96.7 and 96.5.

At Calgary exhibition, with 56 entries, they had 4 entries and took 4 prizes, 2 seconds with average of 96.3 and 2 thirds with average of 95.9.

At Edmonton, with 75 entries, they had 4 entries, and took 4 seconds with an average of 96.6.

At Regina, with 81 entries, they had 2 entries, and took 2 second prizes with average of 96.8.

At Vancouver, with 129 entries, they had 5 entries, and won 3 prizes, 1 first, 2 seconds and 1 third, with average scores of 97.2, 96.4 and 95.9.

At Toronto, with 127 entries, they had 2 entries, and took 1 first prize with 98.5, which is a record of 98.5.

At New Westminster, B. C., with 115 entries, they had 5 entries and took 4 second prizes with an average score of 96.55.

This record would be hard to beat in Canada, and Mr. Trimble, the enterprising manager, is to be highly gratulated on the wonderful showing.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC FARMER

Ted Plumb is one of the most enthusiastic farmers of the district. He came to town the other day with a bag of potatoes and a few turnips and other vegetables and sold them for $40.00. He said he had sold several lots for $20 and more and he considered it easy money. He had sold pigs, he said, every month of the year, and would rather have young pigs in winter than in summer. He had a litter come in when it was twenty below, and he never lost a pig. He had raised three litters in a year without any trouble. He builds a slab pen and covers it over with lots of straw and the young pigs are very snug and warm. He said he was also doing some of his cattle, and was making more money than he had ever made in his life. He said he could not understand so much fault-finding among the farmers, as he thought the money was there if you had a mind to go after it.

ALL RATEPAYERS WELCOME

FILM STAR HOLDS FOR BRAINY LOVE

Screen Favorite Discusses Role of Abused Wife in "Half-a-Dollar Bill"

"Loving takes brains," declares Anna Q. Nilsson. "A successful wife uses her head as well as her heart. A good mother is not just a lovin' mother—mothering takes brains."

Not at all the sort of conversation one would expect to hear while a group of motion picture stars were waiting for the director to call "camera" in the Graf Studios where "Half-a-Dollar-Bill," the new Metro picture coming to the Rex Theatre, was being filmed.

Anna Q. Nilsson admits that she married a Los Angeles business man six months ago. She has faith in her marriage. "I hope we have brains enough not to add our names to the divorce calendar," she said.

"I cannot help but wonder just what I should do were I placed in the position of the poor woman I am interpreting in 'Half-a-Dollar-Bill,'" she continued.

Pities, Yet Admires Her

"Married to a brute of a husband, that is worse than hopeless; forced to give up her only child in order to save its life and utterly unable to survive the storms of life. She is one of the most pathetic characters I have ever interpreted, yet there is something so human and noble about her that at times I look upon her with admiration."

HOLGER CRONQUIST DIES IN HOSPITAL

Succumbs to Typhoid Fever After Long Illness—Bereaved Family Mourn Second Loss in Month. Funeral Held on Sunday With Full Honors From Local Elks.

After struggling for over a month against an attack of typhoid fever, thought to have been contracted from drinking slough water, and having apparently passed the crisis, Holger Cronquist, oldest son of the late E. P. and Mrs. Cronquist, suffered a sudden relapse on Thursday afternoon and died within a short time. The saddest part of the tragedy is that his father died only a short time ago, since his admission to hospital, and the bereaved family have to bear a two-fold loss.

The funeral was held on Sunday from the Orme Funeral Home. The recently formed Elks Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, was present in force to honor their departed comrade. The service was taken by the Rev. Mr. Bergen, of Wetaskiwin.

At the grave Secretary Gillespie read the beautiful but sad service of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, after which the twenty Elks present paid their last tribute to their departed brother. The pall-bearers, all brother Elks, were J. R. McCrostie, Jas. VanSyke, A. Gehring, Clem Brady, F. Reinholt and W. A. McKinney.

The deceased came to this country with his parents from Sweden thirty-two years ago, and had lived with them always, being a steady, industrious young man. With his brothers Dapo and Elias, he managed the large Cronquist farms to the south-west of the city. While of a quiet disposition he made friends everywhere and his death will be universally mourned in the community. Universal also will be the sincere sympathy for the stricken family.

ditional glass surface would require approximately 225 square feet of radiation, allowing for two class rooms and cloak rooms. The total radiation including the two rooms and cloak rooms required is approximately 600 square feet. This would entail a rather costly revision to your heating system, requiring additional risers carried up from your main steam line Some changes will also be required in your ventilation system.

Considering the whole matter very carefully, I believe that your Board would be well advised to abandon the thought of providing class room accommodation on the third floor. In addition to the main structural objections referred to above there are several other objections as follows:

1. A school providing the accommodation which your present school does should most certainly have an assembly hall.

2. It is not in my opinion good practice to have class rooms on the third floor in a non-fireproof building. In your case there is one fire escape to the third floor, but if the alterations proposed were carried out, this fire escape, in my opinion, would not be adequate to provide a proper exit in case of fire, and also it would be extremely difficult for the pupils in the east class room to readily obtain access to the fire escape.

3. If the alterations referred to above were carried out, I think you will see that it would result in very largely destroying the appearance of your school building. The roof lines would be entirely destroyed, and I am afraid it would be very difficult to treat the new dormers in such a way that the appearance of the building would not be destroyed.

4. I find that the toilet accommodation provided in your school at the present time is not up to the standard requirements, therefore if it is proposed to add two additional class rooms providing accommodation for approximately 80 puplis this toilet accommodation should be increased, not only by sufficient number of fittings to provide for the additional 80 pupils, but the whole toilet accommodation should be brought up to standard requirements.

The points as referred to above are, I believe, sufficient to warrant your Board deciding against any proposal to provide class rooms on the third floor. I would certainly advise you to consider some other method of providing the additional accommodation required.

I am returning to you under separate cover, the blue prints for your school plan.

Your obedient servant.

RICHARD P. BLAKEY.
Provincial Architect.

The chairman, R. L. Gaetz, asked for an expression of the views of the various members of the Board.

W. J. Stephenson stated that he had never looked upon the assembly hall as suitable for school purposes. Neither did he favor a continuance of the use of the Parish Hall.

J. T. Berry said that the persons responsible for getting out the poster the morning of the vote on the by-law should be invited to make the alterations named by the architect at the figure they had quoted in the poster. He was satisfied that the by-law had been defeated by propaganda sent out by people who did not know what they were talking about and had not taken the pains to find out the facts. He suggested that the Board had power to go ahead with the building of the new school although the by-law had been defeated. It had been defeated through misrepresentations and the architect's report showed that they were misrepresentations. The other alternatives as he saw them were to put one class in the assembly hall and send one to North Red Deer, or else submit the by-law again to the ratepayers.

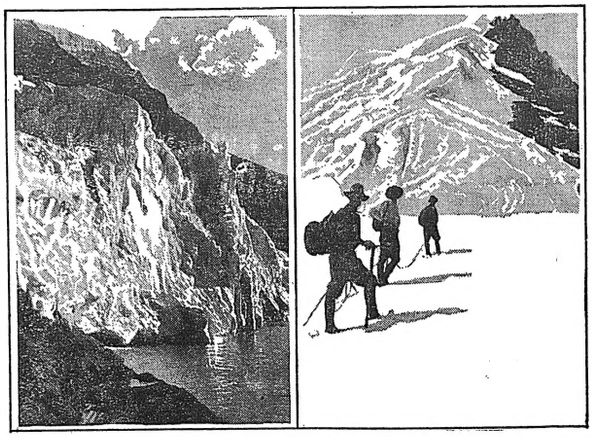

The chairman thought the idea of sending pupils to North Red Deer was out of the question and instanced the trouble at the present time because pupils were sent to the Parish Hall and to the South school whose parents thought they should be sent to the central school.

J. W. Broughton stated that he had been grossly insulted at the public meeting before the last vote. He had taken no part in defeating the by-law although he had tried to make his own opinions clear at all times. He was not in favor of using the parish hall after the present lease expired. Apart from that he wished to have nothing to do in the matter.

W. E. Payne stated at the outset that in face of the architect's report he would never vote in favor of spending money on the assembly hall. He thought that if the by-law were submitted again and the facts shown to the people, it would carry. He did not blame the people for the way the vote had gone. They had voted as they saw best, and in his honest opinion wisely in view of the facts that had been presented. It was encouraging to see so much interest in school matters being taken by the ratepayers He thought the by-law should be submitted again and more pains taken to see that all voters were acquainted with all the facts dealing with the problem.

The meeting was adjourned to meet again on Thursday, October 2nd, at 8 p.m., in the Board room.

OLDS SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE OPENS OCTOBER 28th

On October 28th the Provincial School of Agriculture will open to admit classes for the eleventh school year.

Despite the bad crop conditions that obtain in many districts prospects for a good attendance are very rosy. Already one hundred applications for enrollment have been received and more come daily. This shows that the work of the school is being appreciated, and is directly due to the success achieved by the graduates of the school. Another fifty or more students could well be accommodated this winter, which means that there is still an opening for others who wish to enroll.

The courses for both men and women are of a very practical nature, and the information given is the result of many years of scientific investigation and practical observation. To keep up with the times and make the most money from the farm one should know how to farm in accordance with the most improved methods. You can learn these methods at the O.S.A. in a few months. On the other hand, without such training it would take years of experience to give you the same information. Talk with any ex-student regarding the value of the courses of the O.S.A.

SLIGHT MISTAKE

Speaking of railroads, here is this one.

A highbrow traveller at the St. Johnsbury station approached the Portland express, which was made up and ready to start.

"Is this train ready for occupancy?" he asked.

Trainman: "No, sir. This train goes to Concord, Whitefield and Portland."

TWELFTH CROP REPORT

Issued by Department of Agriculture, Government of Alberta, Edmonton.

Harvesting operations are practically completed throughout the province, with the exception of a few isolated districts. Threshing will be general by the coming week, these operations having been delayed by rains and unfavorable weather conditions of the past week. Cutting of oats is still proceeding, and there is also considerable greenfeed still to be cut.

Threshing returns have not yet begun to arrive at the Department of Agriculture in sufficient numbers to make possible a further estimate of yields of the various grains. Heavy frosts occurred in many districts of the province between the 19th and the 26th inst. as a result of which the grade of grain still uncut was lowered. In the southern districts threshing operations were fairly well advanced when the rains of the past week held up operations. In the central districts there are still a few scattered fields to cut. In the Grande Prairie and Peace River district, harvesting was practically completed last week, but threshing has also been delayed there.

The advantages of irrigation have been emphasized in the southern irrigation districts this season, in the comparison that is made between the yields obtained where irrigation was carried on, and those obtained on lands where irrigation was neglected, the latter yielding scarcely more than five or six bushels to the acre in many localities, while crops on the irrigated lands have produced well. Where fall irrigation was practised, the benefits were particularly apparent.

The second cutting of alfalfa is proceeding in the south, and is yielding a good crop. The large area in corn in the south this year will give a disappointing yield on account of the unfavorable weather. The general results with corn, however, have been such that farmers will not be discouraged in pursuing a policy of corn production in the future, especially since all corn growing areas on the continent have expressed similarly unfavorable conditions the past season.

Livestock is in excellent condition, and in spite of adverse conditions, feed will not be a serious problem.

FRUIT BEARING

If we could harness the Niagara of sympathy, and get it to work in educating the ignorant, in helping the helpless, in nursing the sick, in reclaiming the fallen, what gracious revolutions would be worked in a day!

The seventh meeting of the Council was held in the Municipal office on Saturday, September 20th, at 11 a.m., with all councillors present. On motion of McRae, the minutes of the previous meeting were adopted as read. A letter from Payne & Graham was read re. Crockett vs. Willmore, urging the Council to distrain for taxes due on the N. E. 14 and S. E. 23-37-23-4. As both these gentlemen were present, they were given a hearing by the Council, and after due consideration, it was moved by W. C. McKay that this Council refuse to take any action. Carried.

The matter of closing the Ardley station again came up for discussion, and on motion of Wilton, the Secretary was instructed to write again to the Board of Railway Commissioners to request them to reconsider this matter. Carried.

Another letter from the S. S. B. in connection with the road diversion on the S. ½ 17 and S.E. 20-36-23-4 was read in which they stated that they would not accept less than $25.00 per acre for the land taken. It was moved by McRae, that we still refuse to pay more than $20.00 per acre. Carried.

Mr. J. W. Harris was present to ask the Council to take steps to collect the taxes on the N.W. 32-36-23-4, and on motion of Collins the Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to distrain for same. Carried.

In dealing with a letter from the Calgary General Hospital re. the account of Mrs. Alice Moore, amounting to $190.35, it was moved by J. H. Brown that the Secretary write to enquire if any attempt had ever been made to collect this account. Carried.

In the matter of the complaint sent in by L. Higginbottom at the previous meeting that a prairie fire had escaped from the road and burned part of his fence and about 9 acres of pasture, it was moved by W. C. McKay that as Mr. Higginbottom had agreed to accept the amount of $5.00 as full compensation, this amount be paid. Carried.

Re. diversion on the N.E. 36-37-25-4 (E. P. Ranch Co.), it was moved by J. H. Brown that we agree to abandon this diversion and put the road back on the original road allowance, also remove the fences and pay the sum of $15.00 for the time the road has been in use. Carried.

Re. a letter from C. E. Greenwood asking compensation for road diversion on the S.W. 34-36-23-4, it was moved by McRae that we allow $20.00 per acre for 4.52 acres so taken. Carried.

Moved by Ross, that we engage Dr. Raper as Medical Health Officer for the north half of the Municipal District at a salary of $75.00 per year. Carried.

In dealing with a letter from the manager of the Union Bank at Elnora, requesting the Council to waive the hospital account against the S. E. 20-36-23-4, which had recently been taken over by the Union Bank, it was moved by W. C. McKay that we refuse to do this. Carried.

Moved by W. C. McKay, that we accept with regret the resignation of W. G. Clendening as auditor, as he is about to move to Vancouver, B. C. Carried.

Two applications to fill the above vacancy were before the Council, one from C. S. Armstrong, of Delburne, the other from F. H. Lloyd, of Delburne, and on motion of T. H. Collins the appointment was given to F. H. Lloyd at the usual salary of $100.00. Carried.

As it was apparent that the Assessor would not be able to complete the assessment in the required time, it was moved by Ross that the Secretary write the Department of Municipal Affairs for an extension of six weeks time. Carried.

A petition was presented by the residents of the hamlet of Lousana asking the Council to pass a by-law to restrain animals from running at large within the hamlet. Moved by Collins, that the Secretary be instructed to draft a by-law and present it at the next meeting of the Council. Carried.

George Rudiger was again before the Council, claiming damages which he considered due him on account of a scrub bull which he drove to the pound from his premises and which afterwards in some manner escaped from the pound. The amount asked for was $100.00, and on motion of Ross this matter was laid over until the next meeting for further consideration. Carried, McRae voting against.

Moved by J. H. Brown, that W. G. McKay be appointed Deputy Reeve for the balance of the year. Carried.

The Council now considered the report of the committee which was appointed at the previous meeting to investigate the matter of damages on the N.W. 3-38-22-4 (S. F. Penfold), alleged to have been caused by a fire set out by a road foreman in Div. No. 6.

Moved by Wilton, that the report be accepted with thanks. Carried.

LIFE AND CONTENTMENT

Do Your Best and Don't Worry, Is Good Maxim

In Newton, Connecticut, the other day, Mrs. Nora Bradley Kane died at the age of 109. She had always been blessed with health—a privilege not universal to persons who attain long life, yet frequent among them.

Mrs. Kane's formula was "Work hard and leave all the rest to God." An admirable maxim for one endowed with excellent health, and the latter half of it applicable to everyone. For the physically frail it might be modified to "Do your duty and leave all the rest to God."

Still, not over-strong individuals, and even invalids, often show a phenomenal capability for getting away with work. Herbert Spencer thought out and wrote his whole system of "synthetic philosophy" despite a handicap of invalidism that would have prevented a less resolute man from ever accomplishing a tenth of such a task.

Formulas for living to very old age are constantly coming to light. The public is eager for them. One of the best of them all is one that is usually applied rather to transitory conditions than to a permanent aim. It is the watchword, "Don't worry."

Mrs. Kane's aphorism is in fact saying "Don't worry," in another way. For one who entrusts what he or she cannot accomplish, to Divine Providence, will not worry.—Buffalo Times.

SUPPORT YOUR HOME PAPER

Disloyalty of Citizens Forces Many Printers Out of Business

Hundreds of small newspapers all over the country have given up the ghost, for a number of reasons. Lack of support upon the part of people whom they hope to serve, too many papers in the field, poor management and many other things, including lack of working capital, are causes.

Small print shops over the country are failing steadily, because of competition from nearby cities. Large concerns which depend for their profits upon fat political training, state printing and large orders from large firms, send their agents to small towns to grab the city and county commercial printing where they can get it and to pick up smaller jobs at cost or less as fillers.

Disloyalty to the home paper and the home printers upon the part of the people of the town is gradually forcing many of them out of business. —Anoka, Minn., Herald.

GREENLAND WAS ONCE FLOURISHING COLONY

Cattle Throve On Its Pastures Thousand Years Ago

Greenland has come into the public eye and the newspaper headlines lately through the exploits of the United States aviators, who made it a stage on their round-the-world journey. They had no bleaker landing place, and none in which a mishap would have exposed them to greater hardships and perils. Though today Greenland is a synonym for barren desolation, its principal products being glaciers and its main exports being icebergs, it was the seat of a flourishing settlement long before Columbus' voyage of discovery. In its southern fiords Eric and Red founded a colony nearly a thousand years ago. Sheep, cattle and horses drove on its green pastures, whence it took the name now mocked by the icy mountains which cover the interior. The hardy Norsemen hunted the reindeer on land and the seal and white bears drifting on ice floes along the shore. At sites still marked on the map at Godthaab and Julianshaab were the chief settlements, of which clear traces remain. As late as the fourteenth century there were about 300 farms, two cloisters and six-teen churches, one of which was the Episcopal residence. This little community existed in political independence until 1261, when it surrendered to the Norwegian Crown.

Communication between Greenland and the mother country, which was intimate for a long time, ceased at the beginning of the fifteenth century, and the colony gradually expired. The last Bishop to live in the island died in 1377. But nominally the tie with Europe continued, and when the union of Norway and Denmark was dissolved in 1614 Greenland was claimed by the Danish King. There is scientific evidence of a radical change of climate during the Middle Ages, ascribed to cosmic causes affecting a large part of the earth. Bodies buried 600 years ago have recently been found in a frozen state, and it is contended that they were buried in unfrozen ground, as the corpses were decomposed while the wrappings remained intact, covered by grass roots.

Today, the population numbers about 10,000, of whom only 300 are Europeans, mostly Danish officials, the trade of the colony being a Government monopoly. Unless there is another change of climate the Eskimos will not again be challenged by European immigration. And it is unlikely, after recent experiences, that it will be on the route of the world's aerial highway.—Toronto Globe.

GREAT BRITAIN, EGYPT AND THE SUDAN

Ever since the war ended the question of Egypt has been a disturbing one for Great Britain. The difficulty has now extended to the Sudan also and the disturbances and bloodshed recently reported from that region show that the trouble is becoming serious. It may be useful, therefore, to give a short review of the events which have taken place in Egypt and the Sudan since Great Britain assumed her predominant position there.

Prior to the Great War Egypt was nominally a dependency of Turkey and paid an annual cash tribute, but in reality for about a century she had been independent of Turkey. Till 1882 Egypt was under the absolute rule of her Khedive, and that rule was a thoroughly bad one. Tyranny, injustice, extravagance and corruption were the hall marks of the government, and the lot of the average Egyptian peasant was miserable in the extreme. The country was bankrupt, and the European bondholders who had lent money to the government were pressing their claims urgently. The Sudan was subject to Egypt and there too misgovernment and oppression had reached such a pitch that the Sudanese were driven into revolt by sheer misery.

In 1882, France and Great Britain on behalf of the foreign bondholders were pressing for reforms in the financial administration of the country. Their demands were resented by the Khedive and the corrupt ruling clique in Egypt, and an ambitious officer of the Egyptian army, Arabi Pasha, began a military rising or revolt directed against all foreigners. The rising led to the bombardment of Alexandria by the British fleet and the subsequent short campaign under Lord Wolesley, which ended in the complete defeat of Arabi Pasha and the Egyptian army at Tel-el-Kebir. From that date onwards a British garrison has remained in Egypt, and British civil advisers have until quite recently controlled the administration of the country.

In the meantime the Sudan had risen in revolt against the Egyptians. The Mahdi and his Dervishes had invaded the country from the south, and in spite of the horrible barbarity of his rule the Sudanese supported him rather than the Egyptians. The feeble and bankrupt Egyptian government made some efforts to stem the tide of invasion. They employed some British officers to lead their armies, but these armies were ill-equipped, ill disciplined and wholly lacking in either courage or enthusiasm for the cause of Egypt. Disaster after disaster followed. In 1885, the famous General Gordon, sent into the Sudan at the instance of the British Government to conduct the evacuation of the country by the Egyptian garrisons, was besieged in Khartoum and, as is well known, was killed there when the Dervishes took the town only a few days before the British relieving column arrived. The circumstances under which Gordon was exposed to death must always remain an ineffaceable stain on the memory of Mr. Gladstone, then Prime Minister of Great Britain.

By the time of Gordon's death Lord Cromer had established an increasingly firm control over the Egyptian government, had forced the Khedive Ismail to abdicate, and replaced him by his son. This had been done in face of the constant opposition offered by other European powers, chiefly France, with whom Great Britain was then on the worst of terms, and also in spite of the miserably weak and vacillating policy of the British Government under Mr. Gladstone. Only Lord Cromer's forceful genius could have done what he did in face of such obstacles.

Upon the death of Gordon, Lord Cromer insisted on the complete evacuation of the Sudan until such time as the finances of Egypt had been reformed, and the country brought under decent government. This reform was gradually effected. Strict economy, honest administration, wise and far-seeing schemes of development, based almost wholly on water conservation on the River Nile, gradually produced results. Bankruptcy, corruption, tyranny gave place to something like prosperity, order and justice. The Egyptian peasantry discovered that British rule meant for them water for their crops, reduced taxation, and freedom from arbitrary cruelty and oppression.

Meanwhile British officers were working hard to reform and train the Egyptian army. In former days that army was recruited by the most cruel forms of compulsion; the soldiers were miserably fed and equipped, brutally ill-treated and hardly ever paid anything. If they ever did return to their homes, they usually did so broken in health and spirit, mere wrecks of men, filled with bitter hatred of the army of which they had been members, and the government that had forced them into it. Under British rule all that was changed. The men were properly looked after, got their food and pay promptly, and were given regular leave to visit their homes, where their immensely improved appearance was a source of complete surprise to their families and acquaintances. Naturally the fighting value of these men improved immeasurably under such treatment. They trusted and respected their leaders when these were British officers instead of hating and despising them as they had done when they were Egyptians.

In the Sudan a terrible state of things existed. Under the barbarous rule of the Mahdi and his successor the Khalifa the population fell in numbers from six to two millions in little more than 12 years. Massacre, starvation, and slavery accounted for the fall. At length in 1898 a mixed army of British, Egyptian and Sudanese troops under Lord Kitchener advanced into the Sudan. At Atbara the Dervish army was beaten and the Emir Mahmud, its leader, was captured. Another year of careful preparation followed, and then came a further advance, this time on Khartoum itself, outside of which was fought the decisive battle of Omdurman, in which the Dervishes were utterly routed, and Khartoum was taken. In the following year in yet another lesser battle the Khalifa was killed and the remnants of the Dervish power finally broken by Sir Reginald Wingate and his army.

The Sudan having been thus reconquered, a period of reorganisation followed. Order was introduced in the Sudan just as it had been in Egypt. Great barrage schemes were carried out on the Nile. The Sudan as well as Egypt entered on a period of such peace and prosperity as they had never known before. The best evidence of this and the finest testimony to British rule is found in the fact in twenty years after the reconquest of the Sudan by Great Britain its population trebled in number.

In 1904 the Franco-British entente cordiale resulted in an agreement which put an end to French rivalry and opposition in Egypt, and helped greatly to give Lord Cromer and his subordinates a freer hand in their policy of reform, a policy by the way which was anything but liked by the Khedive Abbas Hilmi, who would much have preferred to be allowed to follow in the steps of his predecessors before British control came in. When the Great War broke out, he was on a visit to Turkey. He openly declared in favor of Germany and was promptly deposed.

Gratitude is not a strong characteristic of human nature, and the gratitude of nations is even rarer than that of individuals. The Egyptians had no sooner attained to a measure of prosperity and freedom than they began to agitate and intrigue to get rid of the British. The former ruling class of half-Turkish Egyptians hated the justice and honesty enforced by the British and they had the secret encouragement of the Khedive. As long as Lord Cromer's strong hand was on the helm opposition was kept well in hand, but when increasing age compelled him to retire and return home, the opposition to his successor, Sir Eldon Gorst, increased rapidly. As will be remembered, Lord Kitchener himself was appointed as British agent-general in Egypt, and naturally his forceful character and great prestige in the country again quieted the agitators, but with the Great War came great difficulties.

Undoubtedly mistakes were made by Great Britain with respect to Egypt in the war. It was at first announced that Egypt should be kept wholly neutral in the war, but it was found impossible to keep to this policy. The Turkish attack on Egypt and the Suez Canal, the urgent need of camels and all sorts of raw materials for war purposes, finally the necessity for getting men for the labour battalions of the army—all these things made it impossible to maintain the neutrality of Egypt. It was entirely right that Egypt should take her share in the burdens of the war, since it was only by British aid that she was saved from the horrors of invasion by Turks from the East and Senussi Arabs from the West, but the inevitable hardships of the war none the less aroused acute discontent in Egypt, where their necessity was not understood. The disaffected Egyptian leaders naturally ascribed all the troubles to the British, and were careful to spread this idea among the ignorant classes.

At the end of the war President Wilson's utterly foolish declaration as to self-determination for all nations, and the independence won from the Turks by the very backward Arab races, supplied the last final sparks that fired the train of Egyptian discontent. Through her native leaders she demanded immediate and complete independence, and when it was refused, a revolt broke out which had to be suppressed by force with some loss of life. Agitation and negotiations have followed. Saad Zaghlul Pasha, the leader of the Anti-British movement, became a national hero as the result of his deportation and imprisonment by the British authorities. When at length the British Government decided to take the Egyptians at their own word and give them practical independence, Zaghlul Pasha became Prime Minister at the head of an almost unanimous Parliament.

Two problems have been left unsettled. One is that of the Suez Canal and the British garrison in Egypt. The other is that of the Sudan. The Suez Canal was not built by Egypt and does not belong to Egypt. It belongs to an international company in which the British Government hold a large number of shares. Moreover, the Canal is so important for British communications to India and the East that it is absolutely necessary for Britain to see that the neutrality of the Canal as established by international treaty is maintained. The Panama Canal was deemed of such importance by the United States that she unofficially stirred up a revolution in what was the independent country of Colombia in order to get control of the zone needed for building the Canal, and the Suez Canal is of no less importance for Britain. To protect the Canal there must be a British garrison in Egypt and the Egyptians resent that fact.

Further, Egypt claims the Sudan as her own territory. She utterly failed to hold it formerly. She could not hold it now. She misgoverned it before. She would misgovern it again until she was driven out of it by force, as she most certainly would be by the Sudanese. The Sudanese hate and despise the Egyptians and have no wish to see them back as rulers of the Sudan. Yet Egypt claims the Sudan, and it is Egyptian agitators who have been causing trouble in the Sudan recently. So far there seems to be no sign that the British Government will concede the Egyptian demand. It has been definitely and clearly announced in Parliament by the Labour Government that Britain will not abandon the Sudan to Egypt, and it has been further pointed out that already in the brief time during which she has enjoyed her independence Egypt has gone far to destroying the orderly and efficient system of government built up by Lord Cromer and his successors. Egypt is slipping fast back to the bad old condition of things, and her peasantry will speedily realize what they lost when they backed their leaders in the foolish demand for British evacuation.

What settlement, if any, will be made cannot be foreseen, but it is to be hoped that the British Government will stand firmly by its decision to hold the Sudan and the Suez Canal, while leaving Egypt and her crew of ungrateful, corrupt incompetents to stew in their own juice.

THE IRISH CRISIS

The reports that are being received from Ireland at present are not of a reassuring character. It is clear that the Free State or Southern Irish Government had only a narrow margin of safety against its Republican opponents, who are apparently quite prepared to denounce the Treaty of peace made in 1921 with Great Britain, proclaim a republic and face the consequences of war as a result, since the Labour Government of Great Britain has definitely announced through Mr. Thomas, the Colonial Secretary, that it will not allow the establishment of a republic.

The question of the boundary between Northern and Southern Ireland is the main cause, at least on the surface, of the crisis. It will be remembered that the Treaty between Great Britain and Sinn Fein Ireland of 1921 provided that the boundary between Northern and Southern Ireland should, failing agreement between the two Irish governments, be settled by a commission to consist of one arbitrator from each government with a third from Great Britain. It has been found quite impossible to settle the boundary by agreement. Southern Ireland claims almost if not quite all the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh in Northern Ireland, while Northern Ireland will not hear of anything but very slight modifications of the frontier in either direction As to the boundary commission, Northern Ireland refused to have any thing to do with it on the ground that its representatives were not consulted when the agreement between Britain and Sinn Fein Ireland was made. Southern Ireland has more or less formally intimated that unless the boundary commission agreement is carried out, it will hold that the Treaty with Great Britain has been broken and will take matters into its own hands. In this course the Southern Irish Government has had its hands forced by the fact that if it shows any sign of weakness, its Republican enemies will denounce it as the agent of England and a traitor to Ireland, and by means of that cry will almost certainly overthrow it.

The British Government has had to face a most difficult situation. It did its best by referring to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, specially strengthened for the occasion by judges from South Africa, Australia and Canada, the question of whether the boundary commission could legally be set up without the consent of Northern Ireland. The Judicial Committee advised the Government that it could not be so set up, and therefore further legislation is necessary by the British Parliament to get rid of the difficulty. Such legislation is now before that Parliament, but it is entirely uncertain that it will be passed, and even if it is so passed, it is quite possible that one or other of the Irish governments will refuse to accept the settlement and will resort to force to try to get or protect what it considers its rights.

There is, therefore, a possibility that civil war may again break out in Ireland. Great Britain is not likely to employ force against the loyal Northern Government. Any attempt to do so would be so fiercely resented in Britain itself that the Government which attempted it would most likely be at once defeated and have to resign. If civil war comes, it seems most likely to come between the North and the South. Numbers are on the side of the South. Organization, determination, and character are with the North.

In the meantime the South or the Free State is in anything but a happy condition. Economic depression is adding to the difficulties created by political dissensions. Agriculture is the main, almost the sole industry of Southern Ireland, and agriculture there as elsewhere is having an exceedingly bad time. The ingrained habit of blaming the Government for any and every trouble that afflicts them is leading the people of the Free State to abuse their Government right and left, even though it is now one of their own race. The Republican elements have spread broadcast tales of terrible cruelties inflicted by the Free State authorities on Republican prisoners. They are probably grossly untrue for the most part, but they indicate the bitterness of the dissensions existing in the country.

Further, the Republican party are keeping up a constant agitation against the Treaty with Great Britain on the grounds that it has not given freedom to Ireland at all. When they are asked for details of this charge, they reply that the King still has a veto on all Irish legislation. That is true, just as he has a veto on all Canadian, Australian and other Dominion legislation, and even has to consent to all British legislation. He has, of course, never used it and is not in the least likely to do so. Next, they say that there are still British garrisons in Ireland. There are. In accordance with the Treaty two or three small maintenance parties were left in occupation of some of the naval stations on the coast to keep them in order. They are on excellent terms with the people and have nothing whatever to do with the government of the country. Finally, it is said that Ireland still has to pay part of the expenses of imperial defence. It is difficult to see why she should not do so, and in any case she has not done so, having broken the Treaty in this respect. The Republican charges are therefore trivial and baseless, and the fact that they are made by educated men of a certain class gives the real clue to the trouble in Ireland.

That trouble is inspired mainly by the political policy of the Roman Catholic Church. As long as Britain governed Ireland, or as long as the Treaty holds good in Ireland under which religious toleration is secured, there can be no political supremacy supported by law for the Roman Catholic Church. It is hardly possible to doubt that such supremacy is aimed at. The introduction of a bill to give the Irish courts power to grant divorces was at once hailed with bitter opposition by the Catholic authorities on the ground that their church forbade divorce and that therefore they would not allow anybody living in the Free State to obtain divorce, whether they belonged to the Catholic Church or not. In other words the law of Ireland is to be the law of the Roman Catholic Church. There is no need to discuss the merits of such law. The simple fact is that the policy of trying to enforce it is there and will certainly provoke resistance from non-Catholic quarters in Ireland.

The result of all this is that Ireland remains an island of unrest. Lawlessness, violence and the fear of strife in the future are spread abroad in Ireland. It may be that with time the saner, more reasonable and peaceful elements will get the upper hand, but they have a difficult and dangerous task in front of them, and it is impossible to have much confidence in their gaining the day.

FINANCING THE FARMER ON FIRST MORTGAGE

Chas. Peterson, writing in "Farm and Ranch Review" on the above subject, has this to say:

I often contemplate with pleasurable anticipation the happy time when western farmers will use their heads in sizing up the economic problems facing them instead of attending meetings and listening to ignorant demagogues and half-baked financiers with fancy government systems and thereupon return to their homes with minds made up for them by someone else. To size up the present situation fairly correctly really requires only the smallest modicum of common sense and no wide experience in financial affairs. Any level-headed, unprejudiced farmer of ordinary intelligence can readily see for himself just where the problem lies. Having done so, he should get busy with his local member and insist upon something being done to correct the situation.

The Saskatchewan Economic Conference

At the Economic Conference held in Regina recently, Mr. Edwards, President of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, during his opening address, said as follows:

"We have also in this Western country the handicap of having had to pay more for the money that we have borrowed to develop our farms than any other agricultural community in the world. We claim we can not afford to pay 8% interest on either short or long term loans, and we believe that something must be done, and done very quickly, to assure the western agriculturist of money at as low rates of interest as his American cousin. I cannot emphasize too strongly the absolute necessity of reducing production costs and among other things that I believe will have that effect, is a system of long-term loans under the amortization plan, so that individuals engaged in farming operations will have some hope of paying off their existing obligations over a long term of years. This is almost impossible in the short time required by the present system for liquidating liability. Of course, in many cases, mortgages can be renewed, but this is a costly operation, and an expense the farmer cannot afford and should not be called upon to bear.

"I should like to throw out, as a suggestion for discussion on the part of those who are representing the loan companies at this Conference, that they take up the matter through their organization, of reducing the rate of interest on farm loans, and also of making provision for the bringing into operation a long-term loan scheme on the amortization plan, even before the Federal government sees fit to bring into operation some Federal farm loan scheme that will provide money at a more reasonable rate of interest, and which will make it necessary for the loan companies, if they expect to continue doing business in this country, to reduce their rates also. The Federal farm loan scheme in the United States had the effect of reducing the rate of interest, not only on the money borrowed through that organization, but also on that loaned through the regular private channels, and in a friendly spirit I would suggest that possibly something might be done along this line. I cannot emphasize too strongly the dire need of the Western farmer for immediate relief from high interest rates and the imperative necessity of the Federal Government dealing with this matter at once. It is not more money that the farmer needs, but an opportunity to pay off what he already owes at a reasonable rate of interest.'

What Controls Rates?

Mr. Edwards' statement is very moderate and well reasoned, although he is wrong in asserting that we pay a higher rate of interest in the West than "any other agricultural community in the world?" We assuredly pay quite enough, but not as much as the farmers in Montana and other Western states have paid for years and years. He talks about 8 percent. being prohibitive. He might have said, that 9% is a common rate of interest on farm loans in Western Canada. In considering the rate of interest, however, we must take into consideration the fact, that capital is notoriously timid. It demands safety first, last and always and will generally accept a low rate of interest where interest payments and ultimate repayment of principal is absolutely assured. This accounts for the popularity of public bonds and debentures in spite of the low interest rates.

The tendency for interest rates to decline as a country becomes stabilized is well illustrated south of the line. In the State of New York, which has been settled for centuries, more than half the mortgages on agricultural lands bear a rate of interest below five percent. per annum. The same applies to the State of Pennsylvania. In the State of Montana, on the other hand, where settlement is comparatively recent, twenty-five percent. of all rural mortgages bear interest at a rate of ten percent. and over. In Arkansas more than half of the mortgages bear interest at ten percent. and over. So, unless a government loaning plan becomes available, we shall have to wait patiently for lower interest rates until we reach a point in agricultural stability where foreclosure proceedings would be practically unknown. That will come in time.

Amortization of Loans

As to an amortization scheme and loans covering a period of twenty-five to thirty years, if I am not mistaken, there is a Federal law which makes this impossible. It is provided under that enactment, that any mortgagor has the privilege of paying off his mortgage under certain conditions after the expiration of five years from the date of the instrument. Obviously, this makes long term loans impracticable. During a conversation with the late Sir Edmund Walker, then President of the Bank of Commerce, we discussed this matter at length. He told me that he acted on the boards of more than one loan company and had always pointed out the absurdity of the present short loans system. He was fully convinced of the desirability of longer loans on an amortization plan. Doubtless the loan companies would have no objections whatever to extending the period of loans to meet Mr. Edwards' suggestion. It would save a great deal of expense and much worry all around. The first step is to amend the present Federal law. But the farmer will then be told that this law was passed to "protect" his interest. The fact of the matter is, that we can't have both protection and cold cash. That is a lesson we all have to learn. When any concern lends us money, they expect to have it repaid with interest in full. Any "protection" that proves an obstacle to this reasonable expectation is apt to prove very unpopular with the lending public. The result generally is, that in the end we find ourselves unable to borrow and that is just where we are to-day, greatly to the detriment of everybody.

Some More "Protection"

Practically all mortgage companies have withdrawn from Alberta to-day and most of them from Saskatchewan and Manitoba, principally owing to legislation which they assert destroys the value of a first mortgage on property. This statement has been repeated so often, that I asked one of these companies to tell me exactly what it was they complained of. He sent me the following list of charges which come in ahead of a first mortgage in Alberta and stated that the situation was almost as bad in the other prairie provinces:

In addition to the above and other direct charges against the land itself, which are placed ahead of the first mortgage, a mortgagee's rights have also been interfered with by giving a prior lien on the crops grown on mortgaged premises, as follows:

2. Lien to municipalities for fodder and relief.
3. Lien for municipal seed grain advances.
4. Lien in favor of co-operative credit societies.
5. Lien to storekeepers for goods supplied during the crop season.

He went on to say that this attitude on the part of our governments was regarded as highly immoral in financial circles, but that the farmers evidently demanded that this legislation be retained because the governments seemed to be afraid of amending it for fear of offending the country vote.

Bunk in Pristine Purity

I sat in my office for half an hour and looked over this list of alleged prior charges. From the point of view of the man who has lent money in good faith against a first mortgage, it is not alone immoral, but it strikes me as absolutely rotten. It involves the grossest breach of faith. But what puzzles me is, where the "protection" feature comes in and why any farmer should imagine that he receives protection against the grasping capitalist under this buccaneering system. All I can see in it, if I interpret it right, is, that the protection is all in favour of the government, the municipality and the storekeeper. I don't see that the farmer himself is handed any Christmas gift. It seems to me that the effect of all this legislation is simply this, that the provincial governments tell the farmer, that all these charges must come in ahead of any mortgage he negotiates, and that if he is unable to borrow under such conditions (which is absolutely the case at this moment) so much the worse for him. The government, the storekeeper, and the municipality must be protected at any cost, and the devil take the farmer, not to mention the mortgagee. If I wanted to borrow money at a low rate of interest against my farm, I hardly think I should be wildly enthusiastic over this peculiar form of "protection"! The farmers of the West cannot afford to have their credit destroyed. The various governments should create a commission of inquiry for the purpose of removing this confidence-destroying legislation as far, and as fast, as it is possible so to do.

SAYS EARTH EXPLODES AT REGULAR INTERVALS

According to Dublin Scientist Blow-Up occurs Every Hundred Million Years

Dr. John Jolly, of Dublin University, fellow of the Royal Society of England, says that every hundred million years or so the earth is due for a blow-up, during which period the rocks on the surface are melted, the oceans turned into steam and everything made to seethe and boil like present conditions on the planet Jupiter of our solar system. He figures that the next blow-up may be the last; that others may follow a few hundred million years after. This is a disturbing theory that Dr. Jolly advances, yet he may be right, scientists sometimes are. But don't worry. You'll not be here to participate, let it be either a cataclysm of fire or water. Nor are the figures given by the distinguished Dublin scientist, of a hundred million years, so extreme after all, for there are other scientists who say that the earth, in some form, has existed from five billion to ten billion years. If the latter be true, and Dr. Jolly's figures are not at fault, there have been quite a number of blow-ups of the earth in the past, each of them perhaps destroying civilizations as advanced and variegated as our own.—Omaha World-Herald.

THE SONG OF THE CITY

There never is a city street without its bit of song! Above the sound of tramping feet, lest hours seem too long, the song rings out, and though the theme tries to be glad and gay, there is a tired, wistful note that asks all souls to pray.

The city's song is made of love, of struggle and of pain. Sometimes it is as kind to hear as gentle spring-time rain. But sometimes, in the beat of it, an urge unending lies; and sometimes in its measured note a sad heart breaks, and dies.

There never is a thoroughfare that does not sing it way across the boundaries of night and into gleaming day. There never is a broad-hewn path that does not call us far into the wonder-places where the dreams of romance are. The cars that whirl across it are the messengers that go to places that our minds may seek—that we may never know! The broad highway is like a hand that bids us search for fame—the song it sings is like a shout, a banner, and a flame!

There never is a country lane that does not thrill the heart with murmurings of deep content—the little songs that start from its green-bordered verges are like some slim hand that lies, with cool and gentle pressure, on a pair of tired eyes.

The songs that touch a country lane are frail with mignonette, and fragile as a crescent moon—and souls cannot forget the magic of the haunting tunes, the romance of their sound, that thrills a waiting countryside for many miles around!

Oh—country, city, every path! The songs that they shall give will always sound to eager ears where people love and live!

A PLAIN TALK

So long as we hold a low opinion of our capabilities, we shut out of our lives all possibility of rising to positions of trust and responsibility.

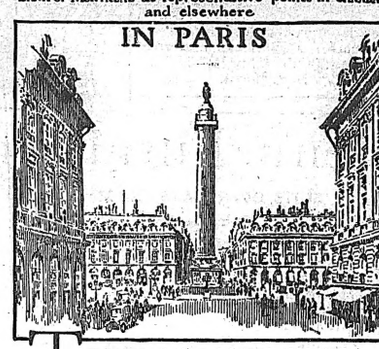

"The vision that you glorify in your mind, the ideal that you enthrone in your heart—this you will build your life by, this you will become."

So long as we think that we are helpless victims of human heredity, of circumstances and environment, we can never express anything but weakness, inferiority—at best, mediocrity.

The first step to uncovering our possibilities is to realize that the humblest child has inherited divine possibilities that will enable him to realize his loftiest ambition. Those who may achieve wonders in every field that the world has yet seen may to-day be working in some humble capacity, be dreaming of the bright future they will some day realize.

IN PARIS

THE PARIS subsidiary of the Bank of Montreal is situated in a quarter rich in historic interest.

From a lofty column in Place Vendôme the statue of Napoleon looks out upon an imposing square the construction of which began in 1686 under authority of Louis XIV.—a square which has witnessed many of the city's greatest demonstrations and which now mirrors the social and business life of Paris.

Here, in the heart of the capital of France, the Bank of Montreal in 1919 established a subsidiary office in the Ritz Hotel Building. In February, 1922, the business of this office had become so extensive that enlarged quarters were opened near by at No. 6 Place Vendome.

GOOD ROADS

This is a question that Mr. Ludwig Larson, of Blackfalds, wishes to bring before the eyes of the Government, the Rotary Clubs, the U.F.A.'s, Municipal Councils and similar organizations of our land in relation to the subject of good roads.

Mr. Larson submits a plan which he believes will be of greatest benefit to the public, and herewith gives the idea.

He has had considerable experience with the making of good roads in a lumbering district in California, while working with a large lumber company, and where tests were made in regard to the use of the wide wheel wagon for the purpose of maintaining good roads after they were made.

He has always used a four-inch tire on his wagons while working on his farm, being the widest procurable on the market. He is, however, an advocate of even wider tires.

Bad roads, especially after rains, and during a wet season or period, are caused by the narrow-tired wagons as they cut into the road bed, and soon ruts are made, this being followed by other teams and cars until a deep rut is the result. The rut being once made it is hard to keep the road in good shape.

The Remedy

At first he would suggest that the load on the two-inch tire be limited to half a ton. The three-inch tire wagon to 1,500 pounds and the four-inch tire to that of 2500 pounds; and that as an inducement for farmers to get the wider tires, that his taxes be reduced, because by the use of the wider tire the maintenance of the roads would cost much less. He, therefore, would recommend that a discount of fifty percent. be made on taxes where the six-inch tires with the Staggard wheels were used. This is the mode of setting the hind wheels outside the front wheel track as it followed along, thus making the road flat all the time instead of cutting up the road with the narrow tire.

It is recommended that all sleighs be widened out to the width of the wagon to follow the wagon track.

All ditches on the highway widened, and the roads widened sufficiently to make good winter traffic.

Motor trucks with their heavy loads and narrow wheels are the great road destroyer as well as the narrow wheel wagon. It is therefore recommended that all motor trucks have double flat tires or keep off the highway. The width of these double flat wheels should be at least ten inches wide. This wide tire would benefit the road rather than tear it up as is usually the case with the narrow wheels, the idea being to pack the roads instead of tearing up. If this change could be made, then the auto would not damage the road in the least as there would be no road to follow. But if this did occur, the balloon tire would remedy this.

Will this wider wheel have a greater draft on the power, whether it be horse power or gas? In answer to this it may be stated that various tests were made with the narrow and wider wheel by this firm where Mr. Larson got the idea, and in only one case did the narrow wheel pull easier than the wide, and that was a rut of soft mud and water, but if the wide tires had been used there would have been no ruts.

Then again a test was made with a load drawing on soft wood, and the narrow wheels dinted the wood and made a draft much greater than when the same load was drawn over the wood with the wider tire.

Another test was made by the horses pulling on scales and proved that the six-inch tire pulled forty percent easier than the two-inch tire.

Mr. Larson believes if this system ever gets a start that it will be soon universally adopted, and that it would mean millions of saving to each province.

OUR GRANDMOTHERS HAD FAIRLY BUSY LIVES

"Our grandmothers," says the Port Rowan News, milked the cows, fed the calves, churned the cream and washed and dressed ten children every morning. No competent woman of this generation need complain about the performance of the ordinary duties of her household." A few items the News has left out. Our grandmothers spun the yarn, dyed it, knitted the family socks and stockings, made and mended clothes, cleaned tripe, made sausage meat, leached lye and made soap, put down pickles, sauces and preserves, pared, cut, cored and dried apples, made candles, looked after the hens, ducks, geese and turkeys, made and tended the vegetable and flower gardens, and helped out the old man when he got behind with his work. Add to all this, and more, the fact that this busy housewife found no difficulty in tidying herself, putting on her best duds, and running over to a neighbor's a mile or two distant, occasionally to spend the afternoon."—Orilia Packet.

HAYNES

September 27th.

A very large crowd of sympathizing friends and neighbors gathered to pay their last respects to Mrs. Jemima Ralston, beloved wife of George Ralston, near Heatburg, Tuesday, the 23rd inst. Mrs. Ralston had been in poor health for some time, and two of the sons came home from Chicago recently, and the family finally decided that an operation might be possible. Jim took his mother to Edmonton last Wednesday. The operation was attempted Saturday morning, but the shock was too much, and Mrs. Ralston passed away the same afternoon in her 57th year. She leaves, to mourn her loss, five sons and four daughters, besides her husband, only the married daughter, Jean, in California, being unable to be present. One son sleeps in Flanders' fields, the boys old enough all serving in the Great War, and one son, George, died some four years ago.

After a short service in Edmonton, the body was shipped on Tuesday's train, and after an impressive service at the family residence, conducted by Rev. W. Irish, the cortege proceeded to Stone's burying ground, where she was laid beside her son. The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful, many having been sent from Edmonton and friends in Alix. The family came out from Glasgow some eighteen years ago, and settled on their farm to the east, where they kept store for some years and also kept store in Haynes for about five years. Mr. Ralston renting to Charlie Wong about four years ago. Practically the whole countryside turned out to do honor to a warm-hearted and always helpful friend and neighbor. Special sympathy is extended to Elsie, Kate and Mattie and the boys left at home to mourn the loss of a specially loving and devoted mother.

Mrs. Dick Lakoman has been spending a couple of days with her son's family, Corey Lakoman, near Rimbey.

Mr. Geo. Martin had a painful accident to his hand while fixing his binder, the needle being pushed through his hand. However, it is healing rapidly again.

Mrs. Bucknell has Jay into Red Deer for a couple of days having his tonsils removed.

Mrs. E. E. Seal paid a flying visit to town Thursday and is busy arranging their new home at Morningside.

SAYS EDUCATION A PANACEA FOR ALL NATIONAL ILLS

Toronto.—"The golden rule is still the supreme law of mankind," said Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, addressing a gathering here. Mr. Lapointe expressed unshaken faith in Canada and its future. Education, he said, was a panacea for all national ills. "If we cannot bear the burdens which democracy imposes, we cannot call ourselves democrats," he went on. "The secret desire to let other people do things for us is desertion." Nobody had a right to say, "It is not our business". "The community's business is our business, and we can always help in some way. All social problems can be solved through the school," said Mr. Lapointe.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

From The News, Sept. 29, 1909.

The annual fair was to open on the 30th. 150 entries had been recorded by Secretary R. B. Welliver.

The new city offices next the fire hall were used for the first time.

Presbyterian anniversary services were most successful. Rev. D. G. McQueen, of Edmonton, took the Sunday services.

H. W. Wright, of the Imperial Bank, moved to Wetaskiwin to take charge of the branch of the bank at that point.

A by-law for $4,000 to add a pump at the pumping station carried by a vote of 13 to 2, only 15 ratepayers voting.

The News asked for the abolition of the election deposit as being legislation against the poor man in favor of the rich.

The markets were: Wheat, No. 1, 78c for winter wheat and 79c for spring wheat. Oats, 2 C.W., 22c. Barley, malting, 35c.

TEN YEARS AGO

From The News, Sept. 30, 1914.

Maj.-General Alderson was appointed to command the Canadian forces in France.

The first Canadian contingent sailed for the front in the largest convoy of vessels ever to cross the Atlantic.

Sir Jas. Whitney, Premier of Ontario, died suddenly at Toronto.

W. J. McLean was promoted to be a school inspector.

Dr. J. Collison, after extensive studies in Europe, opened new offices on 1st St. S., as a specialist in eye, ear, nose and throat diseases.

NEW HOSPITAL SUN PARLOR

The Hospital Commissioners in cooperation with Mrs. McLeod, decided to expend the $2000 left to the Hospital by the late Thomas Sayre, of Newburgh, N.Y., in providing a new operating table, which was procured at a cost of $475, and in building an addition, 20 x 12 ft. two stories, to the Hospital at the south end for sun parlors. The building has now been practically completed and will form a valuable equipment for the patients. The west, south and east walls of both stories are almost completely constructed of glass. The windows are 60 x 18 inches, every second window having a transom. Every second, window, too, can be opened, and is protected by a wire screen. The floors are oiled. The situation is admirable for the purpose designed, as the rooms will have the benefit of the sun practically all day. A chaste brass tablet has been placed in the wall with the following inscription:—

"Sun parlor and operating table were donated by legacy of the late Thos. Sayre, of Newburgh, N.Y., in memory of the late Jennie McLeod, of Red Deer, Alberta."

The Hospital was never in better shape in equipment and appearance than it is today, and the Hospital Commissioners and Secretary are very proud of the interior management and of the splendid service of Mrs. Findlay and staff.

F. W. GALBRAITH ADDRESSES ROTARY

At the Rotary luncheon, on Friday, Mr. F. W. Galbraith gave a short address on some phases of his observations in Britain during his recent trip. He came back impressed, he said, with the desirability of learning more than one language. In the British Empire, at present, the Irish Free State, South Africa and Canada had two official languages. There were two French-Canadians to every three English-speaking Canadians, and it was impossible, it seemed to him, that anyone could ever hope to adopt with success any policy of making Canada a one-language nation, or at least an English language nation. English had grown as a language in world use. It is now ranked equal with French in international diplomatic use, but in view of the great bodies speaking German, Spanish, Russian and Chinese, English had a long way to go before becoming a world language. The one language in United States was its chief strength.

Mr. Galbraith had met several of the Labor members at Westminster, London. Mr. Haycock, one of the members for Manchester, was a son of Mr. J. L. Haycock, formerly one of the Ontario Patron Members. He was the president of the Independent Labor party in that city. There had certainly been a very marked increase in the number of people attending the Houses of Parliament this summer, and the Labor members had to do a lot of entertaining. He had found the opinion of "The Man on the Street" to be that this Government had some of the strongest ministers that Britain had had of late years. These men came, as a rule, from what is known as the intellectual wing. The Labor party was composed of the Trade Unions, who were the main body; the Independent Labor Party; the Socialists and the Communists. The Trade Unionists had their own trouble with the conflicts between the various unions affiliated. In the cutlery trade, for instance, there were unions of knife grinders, of knife and fork grinders, of fork makers, of table-knife makers, of pocket-knife workers, and of scissors grinders. Engineers were not getting half the wages of dust men. Men who grew vegetables got 1 pound 5 shillings a week, and the porters at Covent Garden who handled the vegetables got nearly 3 pounds a week. Wages were not paid on merit, but the scale was fixed as the result of organization and a monopolistic position by favored unions.

It looked as if the MacDonald Government would be overthrown on the Russian treaties, and that a general election would have to be held. He looked to see the parties come back with an indecisive apportionment of members; it was doubtful whether any one party would have a majority at the House, unless the Liberals lost heavily to the Conservatives.

The Russian treaty was in reality a series of treaties, the loan coming last, and depending on the other preceding arrangements being carried out. While the big financial interests were dead against the treaty, the Iron and Coal Trades Journal declarer that staple industries in the Midlands were strongly in its favour as a means of opening up trade with Russia. The Manchester Guardian, the chief Liberal paper in the provinces, was also supporting the Russian Treaty, though Lloyd George and Asquith were against it. The Russians objected to having to pay for debts incurred by other nations in financing expeditions designed to upset the Soviet Government. A condition of one treaty was that should over 50 percent. of the creditors agree to accept a composition of the debts owing Nationals the minority would be bound to accept the composition. It was admitted that Russia could not, in reason, pay all her debts in the present position of the country.

IRISH EARL VISITS CANADA

THE Earl of Leitrim, who has been spending a vacation on this side of the Atlantic, passed through Montreal on his return home, sailing last week by the Canadian Pacific steamer "Montclare."

The Earl is greatly interested in the development of Donegal as a tourist resort, and has been interested to find that part of Ireland bears so much resemblance to Maine and New Brunswick—with wooded hills running up to about two thousand feet high and streams and lakes full of fish. Ireland, according to the Earl, is rapidly settling down to normal conditions, and Donegal has recently received a considerable influx of tourists, there being excellent hotels such as that at Rosapena, which has its own golf course, its own fishing for trout and salmon, and a beautiful bathing beach of golden sand four miles long with waters warmed by the gulf stream. Donegal is a great favorite with artists and writers, George Russell (better known as "A.E.") and John Masefield, being among the number of those who have painted or written about its beauties.

"People are apt to think that the north-west Coast of Ireland is inaccessible, but as a matter of fact the Earl says he has frequently motored from Belfast to Rosapena in five hours. The roads are being improved and motor traffic in Ireland is on the increase, particularly now that so many Canadians and Americans are taking their own cars with them to the Old Country. The Earl of Leitrim who has crossed Canada before this is much interested to see the development of Canadian tourist resorts. He was particularly struck by the tremendous crowds he found at the Chateau Frontenac, in Quebec. It will be a long time, he says, before Donegal has such a hotel, but the present ones are very comfortable and surprise visitors from this side by the conveniences they offer,—Rosapena, for instance, having suites of rooms with private bath.

Owing to the greater ease in securing labor, the rates are also not so high as on this side—one can get very fair accommodation with meals included for five dollars a day, and this provides the opportunity for excellent salmon fishing in season.

Another erroneous opinion, according to the Earl, was that it rained all the time in the West of Ireland. The average rainfall in Rosapena is only from 40 to 45 inches a year. Visitors, he says, are too apt to think the climate of the whole of Ireland is the same as that of Killarney, which he admits is wet.

A RUMOR CORRECTED

Owing to their being in existence a rumor that the late Eric Norlander, who died in North Red Deer on Saturday last from typhoid fever, had been refused admittance to the Municipal Hospital, The News man went out yesterday to find out the truth or falsity of the rumor.

We talked first to A. T. Stephenson, Secretary of the Hospital Board. He stated that on Wednesday evening Dr. C. C. Grant, the attending physician, called up the hospital matron, Mrs. Findlay, on the telephone. He stated that there was a man in North Red Deer who should be in the hospital. The matron called up Mr. Stephenson, who went up to the hospital in his car. Meantime the matron advised Dr. Grant that the patient would be admitted if the Council of the Village of North Red Deer gave an order to that effect.

We next called up S. Pamely, secretary of the village, who stated to us that as soon as he had ascertained that the patient had been a resident of the village for three months, he was willing to make the order for admission, but that whether the sick man himself or his doctor had meantime obtained an attendant and the order was not desired.

Under the provincial laws the Hospital Board must get from the municipality an order for admission of a sick person, if that person has been a resident for three months.

We make this full report to refute the rumor in circulation, as it would undoubtedly have a very harmful effect on the institution if uncorrected.

Recently, while in Grade II. among the little tots, he heard the teacher drilling the juveniles on the words, Min, pin, dim, rim, etc. "Now," asked the teacher, can anyone tell me what Min stands for?" A little hand went up from the rear of the room. "Well," said the teacher, "what does it stand for?" "Andy Gump's wife," said the youngster, amidst a shout of laughter.
